Geo. Smith and Catherine Miller were 1x3cuted at Williamsport, Pa., on Thursday last for the murder of Andrew Miller, the husband of the latter, on the 18th of March last, Smith first clubbed him to death and then hanged him by the neck in a barn. The scenes at the gallows are thus described in the New York Herald of Friday :

"At 11 o'clock the prison doors were closed to all persons on the outside, and five minutes after ward the culprits were on the way to the coaffold. Mrs. Miller tecome extremely neryous when informed that her hour had come, and manifested a d. o ded aversion to submitting to the impending ordeal. Along the upper corridor she mosned pitifully and fr queutly called on God to save her. Down the flight of stairs and along the cold and dreary path to the scaffold she excited great sympathy by her plaintive cries for mercy. She was dressed in a long black gown, the sombre appearance of which was relieved by a white neckije and two silk bows. A snawl was thrown over he shoul ders, but her head was uncovered. She was supported by two men, and at times almost sank to the ground. As she ascended the steps to the high scaffold and for a moment gazed on she engine of death she was almost paralyz d with fear. Her body took a sudden backward movement and she uttered a piercing shrick. Her attendants caught her with a firmer grasp and by considerable exertion landed her on the platform from which the was soon to be drop ped into eternity. Two chairs had been placed on the scaffold, and in one of them she was placed, while her accomplice occupied the other. Smith walked to the gallaws with firmness, praying vigorously while on the way. The cold was intense, and the culprits shivered like aspens. Owing to the frigid atmosphere the attending ministers concluded to have a very brief service, but it was prottested enough for the men who had gathered around the scaffold to witness the terrible spectacle. The ministers read the confessions of the culprits sloud. Whil: thus engaged Mrs. Milier uttered frequent agon zing ories, calling on God piteously assiy spectacle and she groaced loudly. She misery seemed to have been reached when the black bag was drawn over her face. She shula square. She was unable to rise from her ober unassisted when the time bad arrived for her departure, and her two attendants raised her up and held her in position until the Sheriff had sorung the trap.

"Smi h met his fate much more heroically but not with any bravedo, and passed his time on the scaffold in supplication. The man had shackles on his feet and arms and the women was bound with four straps-one about ber ankles, one about her dress, near the knees, to keep her gowa is place, another higher up and the fourth encircled her bands. The drup soon fell after the had assumed a perpendicular position. "The execution proper was unaccompanied by any harrowing scenes, not a single convultive movement of the b dies being visible both naving had their necks broken. Twenty minutes after they fell the bodies were cut down and placed in caskets, exposed to the view of hundreds who crowded about the jail. "Andrew Miller, the victim of the criel crime for which the guitty pair Thursday paid the penalty, was killed by Smith, at Mrs. Meller's instigation, on the night of March 18, 188J, at bis residence near the town of Jersey chore.

Miller was sixty-two years old. His wife, to whom he was married in 1863, was at that time but seventeen. She was averse to the match from the first, but was urged to it by her father, who expected Miller to nake a home for him. They had three daughters, but as their married life passed on the woman grew to hate her hus-band, to make no secret of it and to encourage the attentions of other lovers. Her frequent threats to murder 'the old man' led to the suspicions of foul play, which soon gained credence in the neighborhood. Miller's death was at first thought to have been by his own hand, but in-dications of a murderous struggle led to an investigation, and at length the many evidences of their guilt became so explicit that both of the culprits made such confessions that no other conclusion coult be reached than a verdict of wilful murder."

HE RODE ! UT EIS DOLLAR -A jolly old fellow came down from the mountains just before Christmas to spend the holidays at Sacramento. Becoming tired of footing it about the city he got into a street car, and when showed by the driver the box in which he should deposit his fare he dropped therein a trade dollar. Then he demanded his change, but the driver informed him that he could not give him any unless he paid the coin to him. For a time the old fellow was in a dilemma. His dollar was in the box, and he had no show to get it out. Finally he solved the problem of getting even with the rail-road company by notifying the driver that he would use up the money he put in the box in rides. This he did by remaining on the car fo twenty trips, and, armed with a flask of whisky and a lunch of crackers and chiese, the old fellow had a picaic all to himself.
